Supplier Publicity & Confidentiality Policy

- Suppliers may not use Intel's name in advertisements and/or disclose the existence or content of a contract without prior written consent from Intel.
- Intel will not endorse, recommend or certify the products of any companies supplying Intel with goods and/or services.
- Contractual obligation is communicated in the terms and conditions of all contracts, purchase orders, ‘non-disclosure agreements’, and contractor agreements. (These provisions survive indefinitely and do not expire when the agreements expire).

- Each employee is responsible for safeguarding Intel's information assets from loss, inappropriate use and disclosure to anyone who does not have a “need to know”.

Updated April 2013